

How will the team attract and sell to customers? • Who are the best initial or pilot customers? • Is the market best served through direct sales, distribution, licensing, strategic partnerships or other strategies?

In order to attract and sell to customers, we will partner with home builders and home regulators using a business to business to consumer market strategy. Instead of relying on consumers directly, we can partner with home builders to integrate our product directly into the home.

Additionally, our product will be available to consumers directly in stores. Our app will provide recommendations of additional sensors to ensure home quality, which will also be available in stores. Our best pilot customers are housing regulators and customers who own multiple homes so we can generate data to improve our product.

The market is best served through strategic partnerships first, since it will allow us to reach more consumers in the long term. As the product matures, the market will be served through direct sales, as we plan on adding a subscription model that unlocks deeper functionality for end users.

Work directly with home builders - analyze their homes overtime to determine build quality such, support for consumers

Work directly with consumers, home owners - personal gain, large investment

Work with government, nonprofit/ organizations - humanitarian efforts